Michelangelo (Michelangelo Buonarroti) 1475-1564 Italian Renaissance sculptor, painter, architect, poet. As sculptor, he produced ‘Moses’, ‘David’ and the ‘Pieta’ (Mary holding body of Christ). As a painter, he painted the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel in Rome, showing his own personal artistic conceptions of Creation, Man's Temptation and Fall, Noah and the flood, and other episodes through to the Last Judgment. As an architect, he redesigned St Peter's in Rome.

Martin Luther visited Rome in 1510 (while Julius II was pope) and was shocked by what he saw. In 1517 (while Leo X was pope, raising money through the sale of "indulgences" to pay for the costs of constructing St Peter's in Rome), Luther posted his "95 Theses", which started the Protestant Reformation.

Washington, Booker T 1856-1915 US African-American ex-slave and educator. He opened Tuskegee Institute, in Tuskegee, Alabama, in 1881 to provide adequate education for African-Americans. His autobiography "Up from slavery", published in 1901, is included by W J and R Petersen in their book "100 Christian books that changed the century". He learned "how to use and love the Bible". Washington is quoted as saying, "The great ambition of the older people was to try to read the Bible before they died" and "I always make it a rule to read a chapter or a portion of the chapter in the morning, before beginning the work of the day".
